This masterpiece of the "Titania" decoration family is to this day an absolute eye-catcher. To this day, it remains one of the most sought-after genres of the glass manufactory Loetz.

The color combination of "May green and brown" is, according to expert literature, the rarest version within the decoration group "Titania". This decoration, which was created in 1909, captivates with its typical steel-gray spun threads, playful aesthetics and a bright color spectacle.

The overlay of colorless glass as well as the all-encompassing metallic sheen add a distinct elegance to this intricately crafted vase. In addition, the lush green, earthy brown, and simple tulip-like shape evoke springtime. This art object is a stunning embodiment of Mother Nature's colorfulness as well as an artistic tribute to the awakening of spring.
