This desk exemplifies the clean lines and decorative precision characteristic of the Hoffmann school around 1910. Its strictly geometric structure is complemented by finely executed, partly organic carvings and high-quality alpaca silver hardware.

As a freestanding piece of furniture, it is designed to be impressive from every angle. The back features a fold-out letter tray, whose floral seahorse ornamentation underscores the quality of the detailing.

The design can be attributed to Karl Bräuer, a student and close collaborator of Josef Hoffmann at the Wiener Werkstätte. Comparable motifs bearing the monogram "KB" were published in "Das Interieur" in 1911 and show clear parallels, particularly in the characteristic triangular ornamentation.
